“ I met Jewlian back in the day of Myspace when we were both in middle school. Although we lived states away, we immediately clicked. We bonded over our love for music & all things weird. All of these years later, we have still kept in touch.

Our conversations wouldn't make sense to anyone but the two of us. It may have been a random meme that we thought was just stupid enough to share, or him always asking me funeral related questions. He said I was "his funeral guy." We had so many inside jokes that nobody else will ever understand. He loved making fun of my country accent & I think that is what I'm going to miss the most.

Jewl was truly a very very best friend. He was there for me though thick & thin. Always there to help me laugh when I was down, offer an encouraging word & just be a shoulder for me to lean on when I wasn't feeling strong enough to hold myself up. He drove 7 hours to see me get married. We stayed up all night after the wedding sitting on the ground giggling like little kids.

This is such a huge loss for the world. Nobody will ever be able to take Jewls place. I am so so sorry to all of his family, I can't even put into words how much I am praying for yall. He will live on in everyones hearts.
