“ When I "first" met Eleanor in the fall of 1990, I started to introduce myself and she cut me off by stating " I know who you are." I looked at her trying to remember where we might have met before. "You and your family sat in the same pew as I did last Sunday." Guess that showed how observant I was! She was a volunteer in the office of the Cornwall Children's Center, and I was there to enroll my youngest in the pre-K class. I thought it was odd that the staff sometimes called her "Smiley." I learned it was because of her gruff exterior -- although she truly had a heart of gold. She loved children but only tolerated adults.

As time went on, we both served on the Board of Directors there and became friends and allies. I often gave her a ride to the meetings in the evenings, and she would impart some of her wisdom on me as we rode together. That was many many years ago. I feel richer for having known her. I hope she went peacefully.
