“ I got to know Gene as a young boy, back in the late fifties, when my Dad would go to Haas's Service Station in Hebron. My grandparents lived on Foulmer Street, just around the corner. Dad would often go there for gasoline and I was twenty years younger than Gene. Over the years we met often, at his chip factory in Richland, when working as a police officer for Newmanstown, Richland, and later for Schaefferstown. We also met at times in different restaurants. I truly enjoyed Gene's company, even though I never knew much more about him, other than he knew my dad, Charles Swingholm. It was only on this day, March 29, 2011, that my parents told me about Gene's passing. I was taken back to know that he had been at Cedar Haven and I go there weekly to visit so many. Had I known Gene was there, I would have done the same. I know he couldn't have been there long since we spoke to each other not that long ago at a diner in Myerstwon. Being a veteran myself, my heart goes out to him and all veterans for their service to this country. You can tell who your great countrymen are and Gene was just that, a true hero. I will personally miss seeing Gene, but he will be forever in my memories. As for the family, that I did not know of this great man, you have my deepest condolences.
