“ Dr. Paul Lenz was my advisor at Fairleigh Dickinson University from 1969 – 1975 during the time I was finishing up my bachelor’s degree at night while working full time. He also taught some of the courses I took for my degree. He was so patient, compassionate, and encouraging at a time when I was despairing of ever finishing, and he was also an excellent teacher. He had a dry sense of humor as well as a wide variety of outside activities, and I found him to always be an interesting person. I will always be really grateful to him for all the help he gave me, and just for being the person he was.

“ I met Paul when he was a member of the NIH Camera Club. He was an excellent photographer, winning many awards. After he moved out of the Potomac, MD area he sent me occasional images and we were able to keep up our discussion about photos. I never met his family but I send my sincere sympathy to them because he was an interesting man and wonderful photographer.
